THE candidates for the United States Senate in Arkansas to succeed Judge Walker are Gov. Berry, Judge W. W. Mansfield, Congressman J. K. Jones, of the Third District; Congressman Poindexter Dunn, of the Second District, and Judge U. M. Rose, of Little Rock. They are all strong candidates, but it is believed that Gov. Borry and Poindexter Dunn are the strongest, yet they will have to confront bitter opposition and may either of them be easily defeated by combinations of the other candidates. There is a great deal of lively work ahead for all of them, and Walker may in the scramble secure his re-election, if he wants it.

A PARLIAMENTARY conflict has been avoided in England by the action of the Conservatives yesterday. Mr. Gladstone, with admirable tact and great good temper, effered to compromise with the Tory opposition to the franchise bill by the immediate introduction of the redistribution bill, but Lord Salisbury, the head of the extreme Tory wing, actuated by the stubbornness of his order, refused and in very positive terms to accede to it, and only did so at last upon the urgent entreaty of Whig peers like the Duke of Argyll. A Parliamentary revolution that would have ended in the abolition of the House of Lords and the privileged class that has so long usurped the rights of the people has thus been prevented, or rather put off, until perhaps a more convenient season. Public opinion grows rapidly nowadays, and the example of America is a daily lesson of self-government that is not lost upon the English people. Nearer still to them are the English people. Nearer still to them are their great colonies of Asstralia and Canada—republics in reality, that are only connected with the monarchy by a slender thread. The establishment of an English republic before the century closes is a possibility. It would afford a fine page for the history of the busiest and most prosperous of English eras.
